Nestled in a historic train depot overlooking the river, this restaurant offers a warm, inviting atmosphere reminiscent of a classic pub. While the bartenders are friendly and create a lively environment, the dining experience can be hit or miss. Patrons have reported long waits for food, disappointing dishes, and a frequently changing menu that doesn't always satisfy. Although the setting is charming, with opportunities for social connection, some guests express concerns about the quality of the cuisine, suggesting it might benefit from a refresh. Overall, while the ambiance shines, the food experience leaves room for improvement.
