The restaurant from Brooklyn offers 21 different meals and drinks on the card at an average price of $13.6. Nestled in a charming setting, this Mediterranean restaurant presents a mixed culinary experience. While some diners rave about the quick service and delicious dishes like falafel, schnitzel, and lamb kabob, others have voiced serious concerns regarding food quality and service. Reports of undercooked shakshuka, disappointing customer service, and errors in orders tarnish its reputation. However, highlights such as a standout cholent and fresh takeout options offer a glimmer of hope. For a cozy atmosphere and decent offerings, it may charm some, but those seeking consistency and reliability might want to tread carefully.
