Gibson's, a Huntsville staple since 1956, offers a mixed dining experience that reflects its long-standing reputation. While breakfast options fall flat, with typical fare and occasional service issues, the restaurant shines during lunch and dinner. Diners rave about the expertly cooked barbecue, particularly the ribs and stuffed baked potatoes, praised for their generous portions and flavor. The friendly, albeit occasionally rushed service adds to the charm. Desserts, especially homemade pies, come highly recommended. Despite some cleanliness concerns, many return regularly for the delicious white sauce and nostalgic atmosphere, making Gibson's a local favorite worth trying.
